

Abstract

The present invention relates to the use of bromelain proteases for inhibiting blood coagulation, especially for stimulating the production of plasmin, for inhibiting the 5 production of fibrin and for inhibiting the adhesion of human thrombocytes on endothelium cells. Especially the basic proteases isolable from raw bromelaine have proved to be particularly suitable proteases.

RECEIVED
JULY 22 1982
U.S. GOVERNMENT PRINTING OFFICE
1982 500-100-000